Management and Leadership Development Program

TRAINING FOR SUCCESS

A fresh, affordable alternative

The Management and Leadership Development Program (MLDP) prepares new and veteran police supervisors for today's challenging public safety environment. MLDP gives students the tools and skills they need to succeed in positions of greater responsibility.

Developed by the Suburban Law Enforcement Agency (SLEA) at College of DuPage and certified by the Illinois Training and Standards Board, this new program offers:

- Flexibility in assigning supervisory/management personnel
- Quality training eligible for reimbursement
- Innovative solutions to organizational needs or problems
- Emphasis on adult learning theories
- Convenient location
- Modern classroom and computer lab dedicated to MLDP students

As part of the program, students complete an agency pre-approved Management Application Project (MAP) to develop research, communication and presentation skills as they explore real work issues and answers to benefit their respective agencies.

MLDP Student Comments

"You did an excellent job of choosing your instructors. All of them were top-notch; I have learned a lot and I am already using the techniques and principles learned. Thank you."

– MLDP student

"My life isn't being interrupted. It's easier for my department to cover for me when I'm gone one week at a time. This class also doesn't take me away from my family. Plus the staff is great, the instructors are top-notch, and they give you something that you can actually bring back and use."

– Sergeant, Addison Police Department

"One of the highlights is the interaction with police from the suburban agencies. We find that our problems are the same as the suburban departments, no matter how large or small."

– Lieutenant, Chicago Police Department
